GLORIA SWANSON

● CYNTHIA LOWRY meets the glamorous actress of early films who is still busy in television.

Still tops, but with a philosophy

GLORIA SWANSON

GLORIA SWANSON, a tiny, vivid, articulate woman of impeccable taste, who at 66 seems impervious to the ageing processes, is one of the few really glamorous stars who has made a professional bridge from Hollywood's pioneer days through the golden age of the love goddesses to today's TV series.

In 1948, after all the excitingly successful years, Miss Swanson emerged in her greatest acting triumph. She played a mad, tragic figure, an ex-movie star, in a fine film, "Sunset Boulevard."

That was all very well, but for the past 17 years, when any film or television producer has a role of a fading, ageing film queen, he immediately thinks of Miss Swanson's definitive performance. And the role is the one she ruefully refers to alternately as "you-know-what" and "guess what?"

She's played guess-what on recent series ranging from "Dr Kildare," in which she was both fading and ailing, to an episode of "My Three Sons," on ABC with the emphasis on comedy.

However, she also occasionally emerges in other roles such as a flashy rather unsympathetic step-mother with no theatrical background in a "Ben Casey" episode.

The actress, who is far from fading or desperate, takes all this with a philosophic sigh born of years of association with the studios and stereotype thinking.

TV ideas

Gloria Swanson has lived in New York since 1938, in a beautiful, spacious Fifth Avenue apartment, but makes frequent trips west to work—and to see one of her married daughters and her mother.

Miss Swanson watches a lot of television and has concluded that it is primarily programmed by men who are guessing what women like to see. There seems to be a long string of shows which appeal first to men—particularly war stories, westerns and action-adventures—or the young.

"It is quite hard to find evening television ... with whom the adult ... viewer would like to identify. It seems to me ... deciding what women ... they are going ... the average ... viewer—and I'm ... the ones between ..."

Would she ... series of her own ... do a daytime ... informal ... series," she says ... fun to explore ... of real interest ... And I think ... have something ... surely hasn't ...

In addition to acting, Miss Swanson has an interest in a dress company ... causes and ... busy life.

Britt's TV role

Britt Eklund, wife of Peter Sellers, has a few sweet nothings whispered into her ear by Ian Hendry as they rehearse with Roy Dotrice for the ITV play "A Cold Peace," by Robert Muller, which will be shown in October. It will be Britt's first television play.
