Mike's canal capers are catching

By Max North

THEY don't go much on bells, but the Doherty's' "flower" children can operate a mean peashooter.

Six come from Granada via 12 week with them. They'll probably produce a few pea to prove it.

Ten-year-old Mike Doherty and his 12-year-old sister Liz are the younger brother and sister pair in the Wednesday night programme, "The Flower of Ghosts."

The serial is about four children and their adventures during a narrow boat along 80 miles of canal from North Wales to London.

RIVER IN GARDEN

At one point in the filming a disgruntled technician threw Mike's peashooter into the canal.

Mike, who for many episodes the idea of the kid next door, says gleefully, " He also threatened to throw me in with it.

Adventures and boats are something the Doherty children know a lot about.

The River Mere runs through the back of the garden of their home in Alsager, Cheshire—"And Dad keeps promising to build my canoe," says Mike.

Liz has a sad Alice-Through-the-Looking - Glass face and puts up with a lot of teasing from her brother.

SOLID IDEAS

Even 13 weeks as an actress hasn't changed her mind about going to school to take her "A" levels. She's a mature young woman who puts education above anything.

"I'd like to be a proper actress sometime, maybe I'll join a rep company, but I must pass my exams first," she says.

These solid ideas about her career probably come from her parents. Her father lectures in drama and her mother is a teacher.

On the other hand Mike's ambition is to be a racing driver or a pilot.

He's a living love-hate symbol who has a magic touch which makes lifts go up when you've pressed the "down" button.

Let loose on Britain's canals he fell in more times than anyone. " I had to wear a lifejacket when we were on the Thames because everyone thought I'd drown," he announced.

MIKE AND LIZ DOHERTY

SHE HATED IT

Because he is basically so likeable he can wheedle his way into anything. While most of the unit froze in their boat Scopus, Mike persuaded Billy the boatman to let him sleep on Glossie instead.

"It was smashing. I stayed on Glossie for ages," he said.

Where Mike is a sort of English Huck Finn, Liz is not a messing-about-in-mud type at all. "I remember when we were in Birmingham. It was smelly and nasty and I hated it."

Bernard's theatre was a temple

WHEN Bernard Brown played Shakespeare in the Lebanon, the "Full Temple" signs went up every night.

Four nights of the Bard went down very well with the audience. But it was one of the strangest jobs of Bernard's career.

"We played 'Hamlet' in a ruined temple of Bacchus in a small village high in the mountains," he said. "The nearest town was 100 miles away, and only the very rich could come to see us. The tickets and journey cost in the region of £10 but the place was full every night.

LATEST ROLE

"We acted on the altar steps, and the audience sat in the main body of the temple."

Bernard's latest role isn't quite so exotic but he will certainly be seen by more people than he was in the Lebanon.

For Bernard plays Frank Bingham, a journalist, in Granada's new series " City '68" starting on December 6.

Frank Bingham writes the "Civitas" column in the paper which bars no holds in laying bare civic blunders.

BERNARD BROWN

" Hamlet " in a temple.

How to succeed without any acting lessons

OPPORTUNITY sits in every stall seat. So says 45-year-old actor John Blythe who has conducted his life on that maxim.

" You never know who'll be in front, so I've never turned down a thing," he says.

That includes 650 police concerts and countless appearances for the Stars Organisation for Spastics and the Lords Taverners.

It was at a police concert while he was on leave during the war that he met film producer Alfred Hitchcock.

" He just happened to be sitting in the audience. He signed me up after seeing my act."

EXPERIENCE

The ebullient Mr Blythe never went to drama school, and has never had a singing lesson in his life.

Yet five of his biggest stage productions have been musicals —and he has played lead parts in them all.

Instead of going to RADA he went — on his parents' recommendation — straight into repertory.

His parents were actors Bobby Blythe and Dorothy Monkman. They said, "Surround yourself with working actors, and get experience by working yourself."

After six months rep he did a tour of " While Parents Sleep " which was one of the last shows to come to the old Princes Theatre, Manchester.

START IN FILMS

He was badly wounded in the Western Desert, but while in a Warrington hospital he travelled from there to Liverpool to see Noel Coward in "This Happy Breed."

Coward said he was making a film of the play and asked John if he could act in it. And that was how he started in films.

So far he has made 56 films and appeared in 250 TV and radio shows.

He began a comedy act when he was making personal appearances at cinemas where his films were showing.

" I suddenly realised if I appeared at the theatres next door to the cinemas I'd get paid for it," he said.

That is how he eventually became the lead stand-up patter man at the old Windmill Theatre.

Musicals ? They started with the juvenile lead part in " Irene "

They have included " The Sound of Music " and " Hello Dolly ! " in which he is now appearing at Manchester's Palace Theatre.

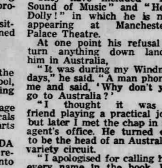
At one point his refusal to turn anything down landed him in Australia.

" It was during my Windmill days," he said. " A man phoned me and said, ' Why don't you go to Australia ? '

" I thought it was a friend playing a practical joke but later I met the chap in my agent's office. He turned out to be the head of an Australian variety circuit.

" I apologised for calling him every name in the book, but told him he should have said, ' Why don't you come to Australia ?'

" He said, ' OK, why don't you come to Australia ? ' And I said, ' OK, I will.' So I went on a three-month contract and stayed for a year."



JOHN BLYTHE

No singing lessons.

YOU BE THE DETECTIVE

IT was your crucial clue that clinched the matter . the till showed a sale of 4s 7d, the price of a popular brand of cigarettes bought by your first suspect, Manners.

The business man, Renfrew, suspect number three, made no purchase at all. Yet Roberts the second suspect, claimed to have bought cigars and a tin of tobacco. Manners bought his cigarettes. So Roberts in the murderer.
