PLAYING DOLCE WITH DOLCI

EDWIN ALTON has a passionate interest in the recorder. He's chairman of the Manchester branch of the Society of Recorder Players, musical director of the North West Lancashire Recorder Players and of the Pendlebury Recorder Group.

He is spending a good deal of his retirement hard at work in Sicily, where, at the invitation of the social reformer, Danilo Dolci, he has introduced the recorder and written a tutor in Italian.

You can hear more about him in Woman's Hour from Manchester on Radio 2 tomorrow afternoon.

The best-stressed men in town

By Keith Macdonald

OFFICIALLY, they call it further education, but when you've got an entertaining group like The Scaffold laying it on the line, it makes learning a pleasure.

Stress is the subject — what causes it and how you can cope with it. Stress caused by rushing to work and being late for it, and by sitting in traffic jams and by arguing with the family and by confronting the boss . . .

situations which happen all too often in the tug-of-war of life.

The Scaffold, in a new series starting on BBC-1 tonight, will be used to illustrate the stress reaction, how it's measured and to show some of the evidence that links stress with disease. During the series they will visit Moss Side, Manchester, when they are discussing overcrowding as another cause.

TONIGHT'S PROGRAMME starts at 11 10 pm, a late hour which might cause no small amount of stress to people who can't decide whether or not to stay up for it.

It's a dull night's viewing, with schedules becalmed in the midsummer doldrums.

Play for Today, also on BBC-1, is a repeat of "There Is Also Tomorrow," the last full-length television play by Hugo Charteris who died last December. He was one of the original writers for the first "Take Three Girls" series.

"There Is Also Tomorrow." a story of contrasting worlds, was filmed on location at Southampton and at Westdown Army Camp, Salisbury. A farewell regimental dance is arranged in honour of Colonel Ronald Sutherland, soon to retire from his post as commanding officer of a guided missile regiment.

MURDER

His daughter, Sally, is at the new University of Slough, where she has become the mascot of the extreme left-wing student world. She invites some of them to the dance and the confrontation between the totally different worlds of the students and the army has a strangely liberating effect upon Sally and her father, both of whom have in a way been brainwashed.

"Territory," by P J Hammond, is the last of the present series of 50-minute "Z Cars" adventures.

"The Privateer" is the one pub in Newtown where villains meet policemen on friendly terms — until the landlord's daughter is found murdered. The pub atmosphere is no longer friendly as it looks as if the Newtown police are doing nothing. But the murder is a job . . . Task Force.

Granada's Cinema looks at what it's like to win an Oscar.

Does it bring instant success, change your life, make you a better actor or director ? Is an Academy Award a permanent meal-ticket ?

David Niven talks about the Oscar he won for "Separate Tables" and director Joseph Losey talks about his film "The Go-Between," with Julie Christie, which has just won the Cannes Film Festival Award.

Dirk Bogarde, twice a British Film Academy Award winner for "The Servant" and "Darling," is asked what value there is in winning an award. "None," he says. "In fact, when I won that award, somebody said : 'You'll never work again for a year.' And I didn't."

★ A kind reader points out that the theme music to the Somerset Maugham series, by Wilfred Joseph, which many viewers have inquired about in the past, is available on a stereo 45 rpm Pye record (7N 17007) made by Cyril Stapleton. On the B side is the theme from the programme, Department S.
