

Mr. Manchester's Lieutenant A general who wants to drive an engine

LIKE many small boys
Lieutenant - General
Sir Napier Crookenden wants to be an engine driver.

Happily for him he is in a position to do something about it — with co-operation from British Rail and a railway union.

The GOC-in-C, Western Command, has asked if he can borrow the locomotive named after the Cheshire Regiment, of which he is colonel, and he has asked ASLEF to give him a union card for a day so he can drive the engine.

The plan is for 100 old comrades of the regiment to board a train in Chester on May 12 at the start of a journey to visit the regiment in Berlin.

The general will drive the engine a short way out of Chester station and says: "I'll be delighted to do it."

Says British Rail: "The locomotive is working at Toton, Nottingham. We may not have much time for hugging it up but we would, of course, see that it passed muster for the regimental excursion."

And ASLEF says: "We would be quite happy to allow the general to become a temporary member for the occasion."

Adds the general: "I hope the union card will be useful to me when I retire."

Thanks...

MY COLLEAGUE John Robert Blum was a happy man today after dealing with a Government department. He had phoned the passport people in Aytoun Street, Manchester, to ask about the renewal of his passport and the addition of his children's names. "They were very friendly," he says, "and the girl actually sounded as if she wanted to be a pilot."

I pass on the bouquet.

The moment before months of preparation had to be abandoned. DAVID COWAN (left), of Osborne Close, Bury, and TONY MASON, of Bolton-le-Sands, study a map in readiness to take part in next month's coldest rally in the world—in Finland. But David's wife has become ill and today he was advised by doctors not to take part in the event.

A police chief's ban leads to novels

TO students of Manchester police personalities a character created by author Bill Keenan three novels ago might seem familiar—as the city's former No 1 Bobby.

In 40-year-old Mr Keenan's third novel, Murder in Melancholy (Robert Hale 18s), out today, Chief Superintendent Charles Miller, head of No 1 Area Crime Squad, appears again.

He is depicted as a policeman with an academic background, an interest in history and philosophy, and an ambition for the top police job in the country.

Mr Keenan, a Manchester journalist and author of eight, of Belmont Road, Bramhall, Cheshire, tells me he based Miller on Manchester's former Chief Constable, Mr John McKay.

Mr McKay was a policeman with an academic background, the had an MA in history, he created the city's crack crime squad, and was very ambitious. Today he is Chief Inspector of Constabulary, considered by the police to be the top police post in the country.

Says Mr Keenan: "I once went along to interview Mr McKay for a newspaper profile and found him one of the most interesting men I'd ever met. He explained his approach to his work and told me about all that he thought was wrong with the police."

It looked like he had a first-class profile. The only trouble was that at the end of the interview, Mr McKay said: "You mustn't use my name."

The article had to be dropped and, says Mr Keenan, "I'm being able to use it built up a frustration inside me that I finally resolved by having a fictional character on him."

Early news

THOUGH the current police, "Dick Whittington," will run until the end of next week, Stockport's Davenport Theatre today announced the stars of the next one.

Mike and Bernie Winters will be there next Christmas in-well, in what? "I wish you hadn't asked that," said box office manager David Coleman. "We haven't finally decided what the pantos will be but we've already had over 2,000 bookings for it."

The early start, which must be a record, was made because of fierce Christmas competition in the North West for both stars and audiences.

"We don't manage to book Frank Field for 'Dick Whittington' until last August," said Mr Coleman. "It's been a successful season, but I think it could have been even better if we'd been able to start bookings earlier in the year."

The easy way

SCHOOLMASTER Beverley Chuter is putting away a new £250 launch has been given to Chester City Grammar School for rowing training sessions.

In the past Mr Chuter cycled along the banks of the River Dee, timing and urging on teams.

Now a launch has been built by a parent and paid for by the parents' rowing club. Watch Committee permission has been given for the launch to break the 8 mph speed limit, going up to 12 mph to keep up with the teams.
